PRESIDENT'S GARAGE

By Tim Thacker
RTR President

Where has the summer gone? I had hoped to be a little further along on finishing up the work on my Spitfire, but when it's 90 degrees in your garage, it's a little hard to get motivated. I would really like to have the car finished before Glenn gets his Stag running. I think it's going down to the wire.

So, I broke down and installed air conditioning in my garage and that has been the motivation I needed. New wiring harness in and waiting for Gary Kinney to make the final connections, new twin SU's going on and once that's done, just a few little things to finish up. After 10 years, I can see light at the end of the tunnel!

I hope to see everyone at the Coleman's annual club picnic. If you have never attended, you don't know what you are missing!

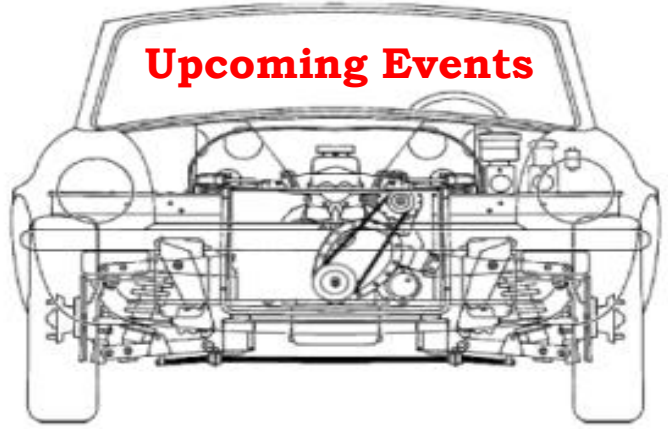

Cheers! Tim

RTR's November 5th London to Brighton Run

By Mike Roe

Harry Lawson formed the first motoring club in the UK. This club celebrated the passing into law on 14 November 1896 of the Light Locomotives on the Highway Act by driving 60 miles from London to Brighton. This 1896 Act of Parliament raised the speed limit for 'light locomotives' not exceeding 3 tons, from 4 mph to 14 mph. The act abolished the requirement for the cars to be preceded by a man on foot with a red flag.

The London to Brighton run has continued this tradition ever since that first run in 1896. The annual event today attracts over 400 automobiles with an eligibility criterion that requires the cars to be of three or four wheel design and certified that their build took place prior to January 1, 1905.

The first Sunday in November fixed date was possibly begun in 1956. In 1971, more interest than usual was aroused when Her Majesty the Queen entered (but did not drive) a 70-year-old Daimler originally owned by her great grandfather King Edward VII and once driven by her father, King George VI. The car has been on many runs since and completed the 60 miles driven by HRH Prince Michael of Kent and staff from the Royal household.

The U.K. route covers 60 miles (97km), starting in London's Hyde Park, the traditional starting point for the Run since 1936. It then winds through the lanes of Surrey and Sussex before finishing on Madeira Drive, Brighton. There are two official paddocks along the route where spectators can view the veteran vehicles at close quarters from behind safety barriers - these are in Hyde Park and Madeira Drive.

On Nov 5th, RTR members are invited to meet at the Publix at John Rolfe Center (2250 John Rolfe Parkway) to perform our own London to Brighton Run. We will meet at 10 a.m. for a 10:30 start (approximately 1 hour later than the 2 p.m. GMT start time the same day in London). The run will proceed the short distance to London Road, then we will make a short detour to Sussex Road and then follow Pump Rd, Patterson Ave, River Rd, and Huguenot to Brighton Green subdivision, where Brighton Road is located. Afterwards, those interested can join the group at Kickback Jack's (10330 Midlothian Turnpike) for lunch. Hope to see you there!

Cars & Coffee Richmond Is Back And Better!

After being booted from Regency Mall earlier this year, C&C Richmond is back in full force at the Stony Point Fashion Mall off Chippenham Parkway. Cars on display are now charged a $5 entry fee. Spectators are free, but donations are encouraged. Payment may be made in advance at the entrance or at carsandcoffeerichmond.com. More than 500 cars were on display at the August 19th C&C. The next is Saturday, Sept. 30th. If you plan to join the classic British cars on display at C&C, get there before 8 a.m., as the lot fills up quickly.

An absent Gary Kinney gets a get-well wave at RTR's August 26th breakfast at Joe's Inn Bon Air. Gary is still under the weather, and we all wish him a speedy recovery.

Lionel Mitchell

The Capital Triumph Register's long-time and esteemed member Lionel Mitchell was killed, and his wife Nancy severely injured in a traffic accident on August 27th. They were driving their TR6 as part of a CTR caravan to a restaurant in Solomons, MD when they were struck by another car. Nancy was medevacked to a Baltimore hospital in critical condition. While Lionel was never a Richmond Triumph Register member, many of us in the RTR community knew him as a friend, a Triumph enthusiast, and a pillar of the Capital Triumph Register. We will always have fond memories of catching up with Lionel at CTR's annual Britain on the Green show. Please include Lionel and Nancy in your thoughts and prayers.

Triumph Archives, Postcards, Paul Newman, Harris Mann and White TR7 Wheels

What do all these have in common? By coincidence, shortly after RTR members Dean Tetterton and Gary Kinney told stories at our August meeting about the TR7 Victory Edition and Paul Newman's TR6 racing a TR7, I received Charlie Edmonson's article that highlighted a TR7 Victory Edition. Then came the news of the TR7's designer passing. Read on to find out more...

RTR August 15th Monthly Meeting

More than twenty members gathered at Gary Kinney's garage on August 15 for RTR's August monthly meeting. The meeting's highlight was a presentation by Gary and Dean Tetterton on their work on behalf of the Vintage Triumph Register to catalogue and archive the vast collection of Triumph documents, advertising, manuals, photos and promotional material collected by the late Mike Cook. Mike oversaw much of Triumph's (and later British Leyland's) public relations and advertising efforts in the United States. The Mike Cook archives are currently stored at the Moss Motors Petersburg warehouse in approximately 25 file cabinets.

Gary and Dean displayed some examples from Mike Cook's collection, including original artwork for well ing this one of Paul Newman's TR6 leading a TR7.

Perhaps the most interesting story told that evening was about Triumph's TR7 Victory Edition wheel debacle. Unique to the US market, Dean and Gary highlighted how the Victory Edition's "Spoker" white spoke wheels were actually sourced by Triumph from a California company that manufactured trailer wheels. While they looked great, Dean and Gary's archive document research indicated that the wheels could not take the stress of being mounted on a car, and many developed cracks. Dean told the story of how all the recalled and removed wheels were stored by Triumph in a Florida warehouse until the storage costs were too high, and eventually sold back to the manufacturer as scrap for 50 cents a wheel. Read more about Triumph's March 1977 recall here, courtesy of the Triumph Wedge Owners Association.

known Triumph advertising, even the smudges on ad photos before modern day computer photoshopping. They both said they would appreciate additional volunteer help to sort through the vast quantity of material.

Dean noted Mike's collections contained hundreds of Triumph racing photos, includ-

Don't think this record of TR3 radio spots made Billboard's top 40.

TR7 Victory Edition

To celebrate, and take sales advantage of the TR7s racing success during the 1975 SCCA season, Triumph introduced the TR7 Victory Edition in 1976. About 3,000 were produced, all with special white spoked wheels, a vinyl roof, unique racing stripes, a commemorative dash badge, and air-conditioning. From the looks of some well preserved examples on eBay, these special TR7s are considered collectable classics by some. Others, like the one reposing in a Denver junkyard, not so much. Note that the 8-track sleeve on a well weathered driver's seat

“suggests that the car got parked forever while Snif ‘n’ the Tears were still in the charts.”

British Car Designer Harris Mann, Responsible for the Triumph TR7, Died at the Age of 85

We’ve received news that TR7 designer Horace Mann died August 14th at the age of 85. According to Hemmings “Mann introduced three distinctive shapes into automotive design, including the Austin-Morris 18-22 (later re-badged ‘Princess’) and the aforementioned Triumph TR7, two wedge-shaped wonders that left an indelible impression on British automotive design. The third and arguably most famous of the three was the Austin Allegro. Mann also had a hand in designing the first Ford Escort and the Capri during his time at Ford from 1962-1968, as well as the Morris Ital, and MG Rover models such as the ZR, ZS and ZT.” Many TR7 and TR8 owners had a chance to meet and talk with Mr. Mann over the years as he was a regular at Triumph and British Leyland classic car events.

Postcard Corner By Charlie Edmonson

Triumph and other British car postcards have been scarce over the past few months, but I did recently acquire a very nice card featuring Continental Cars, Inc. in St. Louis. The postcard states that they are the “area’s newest and fastest growing MG and Triumph Dealer.” Isn’t it great to see all these brand-new Triumphs!

The green TR7 is a Victory Edition, (vinyl top, unique stripes, and white spoke wheels) launched in 1976 to promote the recent TR7 track victories. A total of 3,000 of these were produced. The wheels were later recalled for separation.

I’m not sure about the Spitfires. I think stripes were offered in 1975, but it appears (though hard to be sure) that the door handle on the brown car is black, while the 1975 and 1976 handles were all silver. The black handle on the red car looks like these four may be 1977 models.

The window sign is promoting a Demonstrator Sale, while the blue TR7 is a demonstrator with low miles.

I was unable to determine if Continental Cars is still in business.

Editor's Note: RTR members Mike Roe, Ken Nachman, Don Tate and I just returned earlier this week from an amazing classic car focused trip to the UK. During our five full days there, we visited three car museums, a historic racetrack, a cathedral, a ruined abbey, a Ferrari dealer, Windsor Castle and the largest outdoor autojumble in Europe. Along the way, we ate at eight pubs and visited way too many EV charging stations to count. Suffice to say, we have much more to share about this trip than can be reported in this issue of The Spokes. Mike got home a day early, so he gets to report first. Expect much more about our adventures in future issues. G.L.

Don, Glenn, Ken and Mike's Excellent Adventure By Mike Roe

Earlier in the summer, Glenn Larson invited a few RTR kindred spirits to join him on a short trip to the UK to attend the September 2-3 Autojumble at Beaulieu. Located in the New Forest National Park in southern England, Beaulieu is the site of an abbey that dates back to 1200 on the grounds of Lord Montague's estate. The autojumble is a gathering of private citizens and vendors selling parts and services for all makes of British cars. It is huge, with over 700 stalls spread over three fields.

Glenn had made arrangements with his usual military precision, with reservations at pubs every evening, hotel arrangements and a great deal on a Polestar 2, a fully electric vehicle (EV) through Hertz (more on that later). Ken, Don and Glenn flew out of Dulles on Aug 30, while I took advantage of progeny who work in the industry and flew out of Richmond. I was scheduled to arrive five plus hours ahead of the group at London Heathrow Airport, but my plane had to turn back because of a mechanical issue, resulting in a five hour delay. I ended up getting to the (pre-arranged) meeting point about 20 minutes before the group. We had no problems collecting the rental car and proceeded to Brooklands, a racetrack of historical significance in Weybridge, about 30 minutes from Heathrow. Brooklands was the site of much racing activity in the early part of the 20th century and played a role in WWII and the creation of the Concorde, though the track has long since been lost to development. Many of the buildings have been preserved much as they were in its heyday, and are filled with race cars, land speed record cars, aircraft and motorcycles of historical significance. World of Mercedes is also located at Brooklands and features a collection of historical Mercedes, and both an off-road and on-road experience track. Dinner that evening was at the Empress of Blandings Pub near the southern port of Southampton. It turns out the Empress of Blandings is a pig (who knew?). After dinner, we drove the short distance to the nearby Rownhams motorway service exit and checked in to the Days Inn.

Friday, we drove for a full English breakfast at the nearby Walnut Tree Farm pub, then traveled 1.5 hours to Yeovil in the English county of Somerset and the Haynes Motor Museum. The Haynes Museum was created in 1985 by John Haynes, OBE, of Haynes Manual fame, and is the U.K.'s largest collection of cars and motorbikes from all over the world. It is truly an astounding presentation of important vehicles from the 1900s to the present. We were fortunate to encounter Roy, a volunteer for the past 20 years, who walked with us and gave us access to some of the museum's restricted areas and vehicles. The Haynes is supported by a large repair and body shop, where they take in vintage cars for repair and use the proceeds to support the museum. The Haynes was recently updated, and the presentation and detail offered is beyond compare. They even have several "One point" charging stations for EV's, which we took advantage of as our Polestar battery was down to 20 percent capacity.

After recharging at the museum, we drove to the Wagtail pub near Wincanton, which purportedly had several charging stations. While this was true, one was occupied (and had a queue) while the other one was being serviced. Nevertheless, we stayed for a nice lunch and headed on (at 48%). Glenn found a Shell contactless charge point near a Sainsbury's grocery store in the market town of Salisbury, so we next headed there. Though the charge point showed up on Google, it was not yet in service. We headed to Salisbury, found a place to park, and walked into central Salisbury and its cathedral. Once again, we were fortunate to find a volunteer (Michael), who had an encyclopedic knowledge of the cathedral and its place in history (it has one of three surviving copies of the Magna Carta from 1215).

After the cathedral, we went to our reservation at the Bishop's Mill Pub for a truly forgettable dining experience (ask Glenn). Back at the Rownhams service plaza, there was an EV charge point next door to our hotel, but it was occupied by a chap with a Nissan Leaf, as apparently those cars have dreadful range. After he left, the charge point was occupied by a chap from Australia driving an electric Ford panel van. With its paltry 95-mile range, he couldn't make it from London to the house he's renovating in the New Forest National Park without stopping to charge. Glenn and I spent part of the evening talking to these folks (and a nice mum with two boys) who were also looking for a charge. I guess one could call it a silver lining (or lifeboat mentality) when you have a captive audience with which you can share a common struggle. Glenn finally got the car hooked up around 9 p.m. but had to babysit it and move it once it reached 80% (charging etiquette), around 11 p.m.

Saturday was day one of the autojumble. We all had paid extra for parking close to the abbey and early entry, so it was an early morning to make the 8:30 a.m. opening. The autojumble is the largest swapmeet and vendor sale of British car parts in the UK. Every make and model of British car and motorcycle was represented, including many I had never heard of. We spent the full day at the autojumble, took well over 15,000 steps, and got some goodies.

Around 4 p.m., we headed to the village of Lyndhurst for dinner. Though Lyndhurst is a very small village, it has a HUGE Ferrari dealership, with nearly 30 pre-owned and Hounds for a nice dinner, then back to the hotel. Unbelievably, there was an (unoccupied, and in service) charge point at the Lyndhurst village parking lot, so we could actually drive straight to the hotel.

Ferraris sitting outside behind the dealership. After drooling and taking some photos of the cars, we headed up the street to the Fox

Sunday was an 8:30 a.m. start and included the "Trunk Traders." These are local folks who come with whatever they want to sell, park in an assigned lot, and offer their items to the attendees. Glenn figured out that the vendors on the main show field use the Trunk Traders to supply their parts resale business, so the elbows were flying as they jostled for position to get the drop on the competition. We walked the field again and made note of the tents to come back to around the autojumble's 4 p.m. closing, as that's when the bargains are to be had. The National Motor Museum is on the grounds, as Lord Montague (as was his father) is an avid car collector whose collection forms the base for the many vehicles the museum displays. Among the many interesting vehicles was a roadworthy steam carriage from 1875, the car from the Chitty Chitty Bang Bang movie, and what is thought to be the oldest surviving Triumph motorcycle (1903!). The grounds also contain a monorail that gives a bird's eye view of the grounds and the manor, and a display of modified vehicles from the Top Gear TV series (including a couple of Triumphs). Around 4 p.m. we had made our final bargain purchases on the show field and traveled along the M3 motorway to the Mill House Pub, in Hook, about half way back to London. The Mill House pub was one of eight mills listed in the Domesday Book; the great survey of England conducted at the behest of William the Conqueror in 1086. Many of us partook of the excellent Sunday roast that is traditionally offered at most pubs in the U.K. on Sundays. Sticky Toffee Pudding for dessert rounded out an excellent meal.

After dinner, we made the approximate hour-long drive to Slough (near Heathrow) and the Holiday Inn. Don, Glenn, and Ken were planning to take a tour of Windsor Castle on Monday, while I had obligations back home and had to return on Labor Day. Thanks to Glenn for once again organizing a spectacular trip!

Editor's Note: I would not be surprised if Mike, Ken, Don and I took more than 1000 pictures during our trip. See some (not 1000) here. Expect to see much more in future issues of The Spokes.
